

BACKGROUND

Jonathan Noyes

As an atheist, Jonathan used to think belief in God was unwarranted and actually irresponsible. Then, after examining the evidence for Christianity, he was faced with the fact that Jesus is who He says He is, and the Christian worldview tells the true story of reality.

Since then, Jon has been passionate about engaging the culture with honest, well-thought-out reasons why people should trust the Christian worldview. Jon has developed a series of passionate talks to do just that.

Jonathan grew up in Plymouth, MA, and attended American University in Washington, D.C., where he studied Criminal Justice. In 2013, he earned a Master's degree in Christian Apologetics from Biola University, and graduated with honors.

Having more than ten years' experience in the legal field and serving more than five years as a pastor in his local church, Jon brings a unique perspective to his audiences and the Stand to Reason team. Perhaps what's more effective is that Jon was an atheist and spent much of his life arguing against the existence of God.

Due to his past, Jonathan is now passionate about training Christians to not only think more clearly about what they believe and why, but also to be able to communicate these things to the people around them effectively.

He currently lives in Newbury Park, CA, with his amazing wife and four daughters. He also serves on the Board of Directors for Life Without Limbs and Beacon Hill Classical Academy, where he teaches Discipleship.
